MEET & GREET

Your City of Lake Ozark Employees

If you see someone walking around your neighborhood with a weird looking device, don't fret. It's Myron Cotten, a City of Lake Ozark Water Department employee locating buried utility lines. Cotten, a Tusculumbia High School graduate, has been locating buried water and sewer lines for the city for six years. He's the lead for other city employees before they begin excavation work. Without his precise locating expertise, a water or sewer line could accidentally be damaged. He also provides maintenance for the Water Department. Before joining the city, Cotten was involved in general construction and is currently the owner/operator of Cotten Exteriors since 2005 which he does in his free time. Cotten has a unique interest outside of work as he is a multi-instrument musician and prefers the mandolin. He enjoys bluegrass gospel music and has been known to participate in jam sessions with other musicians. He and his wife of 23 years live in Eldon and have eight children, three of which have graduated high school. Of the three graduates, two have graduated from OTC in Lebanon and the other is currently working on obtaining her teaching degree from Columbia College in Osage Beach.
